NO IS NOT ENOUGH!

If Democrats want to defeat the Republican cabal now in power, they need to be more than the Party of No. It's not enough to simply bash Trump, who won mainly because he promised to help Main Street over Wall Street. Yes, Democrats need to draw attention to Trump's repeated broken promises—everything he's done since January has been one long ass kiss to privileged plutocrats. But more importantly, the party needs to present real solutions to real problems. In other words, they need to lay out a specific vision for the future: better healthcare, jobs, education and safety.

This is not to say that the ongoing investigations into possible collusion between the Trump camp and Russia aren't important. Let Special Counsel Robert Mueller and Congress do their job, and let the evidence reveal the truth. The results could well turn out to be more significant than lying about a burglary at the Watergate complex. Trump's damning tax returns might even be flushed into the open, and there's likely a smoking gun there. Still, it is essential that Democratic energies focus on concrete plans for winning next year's midterms.

The polls have consistently shown that large majorities of Americans support universal healthcare, subsidized college tuition, an increase in the minimum wage and even public financing modeled after the Bank of North Dakota. But too many Democrats still have one foot in the Clinton-Obama era of bend-over-backward compromise with the Republicans and big business. Bernie Sanders ranks as the number-one most popular politician in America; yet the DNC treats him like some crazy old uncle best ignored.

Last year the Democrats had all the talent and a big lead, but blew it in the end. They need to stop playing defense only, go on offense and offer Americans viable solutions if they don't want to suffer a repeat of last year's electoral fiasco. They need to focus on how to affect voters' everyday lives.

AMERICAN PARODY– THE PRESIDENT IN THE WHITE HOUSE IS NOT REAL AND NOT TO BE TAKEN SERIOUSLY.

GIVE PEACE A CHANCE

NO ONE NEEDS ANOTHER COLD WAR...OR WORSE.

The best thing about President Donald Trump, at least up to this point, is that he doesn't seem willing to go to war with Russia. That's a good thing because Russia still possesses almost half of the world's nuclear weapons, and like ours, they're always on hair-trigger alert. A miscalculation could end all life on this planet in a matter of hours.

That's an all-too-obvious point lost on many Democrats still looking to blame anyone except their tone-deaf candidate Hillary Clinton for her startling loss in the 2016 Presidential election. Embittered by the outcome, Trump's legion of enemies have spun quite a few unproven allegations about his nefarious Russian connections, but there's a flip side to the coin: Our otherwise intemperate and untutored President seems to grasp the notion that stoking a new Cold War with post-Communist Russia is frightfully dangerous.

Unfortunately, most of the mainstream media have downplayed this important point. Even worse, they've also joined the Russia-bashing bandwagon, making them crazier than the President himself, who most of the "progressive" folk I hang out with love to hate. This is particularly true for those who were "ready for Hillary" and can't get over the bitter aftertaste of the election.

Hillary Clinton's loss had nothing to do with Russian or any other hacking and everything to do with Michigan, Florida, Wisconsin, Ohio, Iowa and Pennsylvania. Going up against an obvious buffoon like Trump, she should have prevailed in all six of those states. Clinton, not Vladimir Putin, blew it because—as Vice News convincingly reported—white Democrats in droves chose to sit out the election rather than vote for her.

And they still don't like her even though Trump has been a disastrous performer in office. A Bloomberg poll in mid-July found that "Clinton is even more unpopular" than the President, who faced withering criticism after six months in the White House. Disenchanted Democrats said they still like former President Barack Obama quite a bit and much prefer Bernie Sanders or Joe Biden to Hillary Clinton.

Instead of agonizing over how their inept candidate managed to lose traditionally Democratic-leaning states like Michigan and Wisconsin, where too many long-suffering blue-collar workers accurately viewed her as a lackey of Wall Street, the Hillary camp blames the Russkies. This new Red Scare is absurd because communism as a vibrant ideology is dead.

Putin seized power as the steward of a crony capitalism, and in 16 years of elections he has trounced the candidate of the moribund Communist Party that once so threatened the West. Putin, a Russian Orthodox Christian, is no more a Red than is Trump, who can also pretend to be God-fearing. And, of course, both men hunger for power and big bucks, explaining why they get along so well (at least at the time of this writing). But if the anti-Russia hysteria in this country continues, Trump just might be cynical enough to lob a few nukes at Moscow to divert attention and avoid impeachment, the way he ordered a missile strike on a military base used by the Russians in Syria.

That is the real threat at the moment. I don't really know if Trump is anywhere near as wacky as his growing number of detractors insist. But if he is, why are they goading him into proving how hostile he can be to Russia? Every time Trump attempts to negotiate with Putin—just as Franklin D. Roosevelt did with the Soviet Union's Joseph Stalin, and Richard Nixon with China's Mao Zedong—his critics scream foul, even when the two leaders have noble intentions. Take Syria, for instance. They've sought to arrange a cease-fire that might ultimately end six years of genocide in the forlorn remnant of a once-thriving nation.

Putin is nothing like Stalin and Chairman Mao, both of whom were die-hard Marxist-Leninists. He is a nationalist strongman attempting to get as good a deal for his people as Trump claims to be doing for Americans. If they fail, let the Russian people deal with Putin, and U.S. voters can boot Trump out of office in the next election. But in any case, peace should be the top priority. H

DOCUMENTING DISASTER

THE SCIENCE OF GLOBAL WARMING IS IRREFUTABLE.

Republicans like John McCain, Sarah Palin and Mitt Romney once offered plans to help curb the effects of man-made greenhouse gases causing global warming. That ended in 2010, when the U.S. Supreme Court's Citizens United decision eliminated restrictions on corporations' funding of political campaigns. For the GOP, thanks to massive contributions from the fossil fuel industry, climate change became little more than a figment of lefty Al Gore's tree-hugger, anticapitalist imagination.

Gore's Academy Award-winning 2006 documentary An Inconvenient Truth and its 2017 sequel raised the public's awareness of the dangers. Their science, however, was predated by the Hollywood icon who directed Mr. Smith Goes to Washington and It's a Wonderful Life. Frank Capra produced the first four films of The Bell Laboratory Science Series, which aired on network television in the late 1950s and were later made available for classroom use. One prescient episode was about global warming.

"Even now," the character Dr. Research noted, "man may be unwittingly changing the world's climate through the waste products of his civilization. Due to our release, through factories and automobiles every year, of more than 6 billion tons of carbon dioxide, which helps air absorb heat from the sun, our atmosphere seems to be getting warmer."

Dr. Research warned, "It's been calculated a few degrees rise in the Earth's temperature would melt the polar ice caps. And if this happens, an inland sea would fill a good portion of the Mississippi Valley. Tourists in glass-bottomed boats would be viewing the drowned towers of Miami through 150 feet of tropical water."

Global warming is not the invention of "liberals" in the 2000s concocting get-rich-quick schemes or hoping to tank the world economy—as the GOP likes to pretend. Scientists have been ringing alarm bells for decades, and their dire predictions have been realized: 2014, 2015 and 2016 were our planet's hottest years on record.

In 1988 Dr. James E. Hansen, NASA's chief climate scientist, offered starkly accurate testimony at a U.S. Senate committee hearing: "Global warming has reached a level such that we can ascribe, with a high degree of confidence, a cause-and-effect relationship between the greenhouse effect and the observed warming. It is already happening now."

Congress had received its first official briefing, and the next day's New York Times acknowledged the significance of Hansen's assessment: "Until now, scientists have been cautious about attributing rising global temperatures of recent years to the predicted global warming caused by pollutants in the atmosphere, known as the 'greenhouse effect.' But today Dr. James E. Hansen…told a Congressional committee that it was 99% certain that the warming trend was not a natural variation but was caused by a buildup of carbon dioxide and other artificial gases in the atmosphere."

Not a single doubter, denier or fossil fuel industry lobbyist was quoted in the Times report. Back then, before the GOP's well-funded effort to impugn science itself, scientists were considered experts in their field. Now Republicans favor the "science" of the corporate titans that fund their campaigns.

Spin the clock again nearly 30 years forward. Sitting in Capitol Hill hearing rooms are skeptics like Trump's EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt (who sued the agency numerous times as Oklahoma's attorney general) and former elected officials who received campaign funds from fossil fuel companies (notably Secretary of Energy Rick Perry). When questioned, they misinform lawmakers that unprecedented high temperatures, flooding, droughts and rising sea levels are merely due to "natural variations" in Earth's climate, a notion that Hansen dispelled in 1988.

He knew a disaster was looming. Sad to say, school kids in the '50s were more knowledgeable about the danger than today's Pruitts and Perrys, even if they only had Capra's creation to rely on.

In 1958, when millions of viewers were tuned in to The Bell Laboratory Science Series, monitoring by Hawaii's Mauna Loa Observatory found that carbon dioxide in the atmosphere measured 280 parts per million (ppm). In 2017 the level of the heat-trapping gas reached 410 ppm, a 48% increase in less than 60 years. Since today's scientists can determine which molecules are derived from the burning of fossil fuels, versus natural phenomena such as volcanoes, they can also pinpoint how much of Earth's current warming is due to humans: All of it!

Naturalist Tony Russell wholeheartedly concurs. His online article "Global Warming in a Nutshell" summarizes the core science linking the greenhouse effect and global warming, which is "easily verifiable" and "based on settled physics and indisputable measurements."

Russell warns, "Every year we don't cut emissions to 50% of current levels, we're making things worse. Much worse." The ultimate goal is zero net emissions as soon as humanly possible. Issues like healthcare, terrorism, poverty, immigration, hunger "will worsen…dramatically, on a planetary scale, and will do irreparable harm in many other ways" if climate change is not dealt with and quickly.

Russell is correct: "Global warming is the biggest, most comprehensive threat the world faces. Dealing with it must become the number one priority on our political agenda." We can't wait for any more disaster movies to become documentaries. H

"I knew it was a bad idea to let Thomas Jefferson write the Declaration of Independence."

Melissa McCarthy is no doubt crying. Sean Spicer, the butt of her hilarious send-ups on SNL, has finally resigned as White House press secretary. McCarthy may have killed this golden goose—Spicer was effectively laughed out of office. But hold on, Melissa—the Republican clown car has already disgorged fresh comedy fodder: Spicer's replacement, Sarah Huckabee Sanders.

Sanders is the daughter of former Arkansas governor, Presidential wannabe and holy roller Mike Huckabee, who infamously stated that Muslims behave "like uncorked animals" after they attend mosque and that birth control is for women who can't "control their libido or their reproductive system without the help of the government." He also thinks that "there's more freedom in North Korea sometimes than there is in the United States."

Sarah appears to have inherited this quackery verbatim. She's been Daddy's pet from an early age. Following faithfully in his footsteps, she attended Ouachita Baptist University in Arkadelphia, where the student handbook states: "Misuses of God's gift [of sexuality] include, but are not limited to, sexual abuse, sexual harassment, promiscuity (including violation of the Biblical teaching against homosexual acts), possession or distribution of pornographic or obscene materials…" Sarah was elected student body president at OBU, where we presume she enforced that code with righteous rigor. We don't know of any mass HUSTLER bonfires on campus, but it wouldn't surprise us.

About her childhood, father Mike remembers, "When most kids are seven or eight years old, out jumping rope, she was sitting at the kitchen table listening to [political commentators] analyze poll results." Is that not some form of child abuse? After graduation Sarah worked on Daddy's gubernatorial reelection campaign, followed by Daddy's two failed Presidential bids. Finally, in 2016, she founded Second Street Strategies in Little Rock, a political consultant outfit to help other GOP misfits slither their way into public office. Now she's prime time, in the hot seat, trying to put a positive spin on the never-ending barrage of spastic blurts and tweets by Generalissimo Trump.

Sarah claims she "volunteered to join Mr. Trump's campaign because he is a champion of working families, not Washington-Wall Street elites." Oh, right. Actually the White House should have a giant Goldman Sachs logo engraved on its facade, given the incredible number of GS alumni in the administration.

To feather the filthy rich oligarchs' nests even further, she promised, "We're going to continue pushing forward on tax reform and laying out that plan. We can walk and chew gum at the same time. We're not done with the healthcare battle."

SARAH HUCKABEE SANDERS

Walking and chewing gum at the same time should be a general litmus test for all politicians, although it would have disqualified Dan Quayle, Sarah Palin, George W. Bush and an entire circus of minor-league GOP clowns. And sorry, Sarah, but after the fiasco in July—yet another failed attempt to "repeal and replace" Obamacare—most realistic people would say you've lost that war for good. Three strikes, you're out.

About the murder epidemic in Chicago, Sarah said, "I think that crime is probably driven more by morality than anything else, so I think that this is a law enforcement issue and our focus is trying to add additional support." Yep, it's all about morality—not middle-class and inner-city decline caused by Wall Street-coddling economics and a failed drug war that disproportionately affects minorities. The solution? Just say no to murder! Nancy Reagan must be beaming down with pride.

Her boss, of course, absolutely despises journalists, unless they're named Sean Hannity. Trump is particularly thin-skinned with uppity female reporters like Megyn Kelly and Mika Brzezinski [of Morning Joe]. After Trump tweeted that Brzezinski was "bleeding badly from a face-lift," Sarah was asked if maybe he had gone too far with the insult. "The things that show has called him," she retorted, "and not just him, but numerous members of his staff, including myself and many others, are very deeply personal. So to then turn and pretend like this approach is…I guess it's kind of like we're living in the Twilight Zone."

Boo-hoo, snowflake! But she got one thing right: We are living in a Twilight Zone, with a POTUS mouthing off like a drunken lumberjack, spewing tit-for-tat bullshit against anyone who inflames his dirigible-size ego. There have been a few oafs in the Oval Office, but never an occupant who habitually degrades the dignity of the post like Trump does on a daily basis. George Stephanopoulos once asked Sarah if she would promise to always tell the truth. "Absolutely," she vowed. "Not just to you. I think that is our duty, certainly. I have three young kids. I want to go home and be able to look them in the eye every day."

Soon after, about the firestorm over team Trump's collusion with the Russians, she claimed with a straight face, "They've come up with nothing when there's real issues, I think, with some of the activities that the Democrats took place in." Nothing? Is that why Paul Manafort and Mike Flynn both resigned, Jeff Sessions had to recuse himself from the Russia investigation, and both Donald Jr. and Jared Kushner are being grilled by the Senate about secret contacts with Russians they had failed to disclose? Some "nothingburger"! You might have to face those three kids with a sack over your head, Sarah.

Later she reiterated the honesty pledge: "Our goal is to be as transparent as humanly possible." Sort of like saying, "My goal is to quit smoking—sometime before I die." How about just doing it instead of committing to do it someday. A good start would be the release of Trump's tax returns, still held as tightly as the Ark of the Covenant. Is that not "humanly possible"? Hasn't the IRS finished the alleged audit by now, at least for one year in question?

When Trump decided not to attend the traditional White House Correspondents' Dinner, Sarah explained why with what she claimed was an old Southern expression: "If a Girl Scout egged your house, would you buy cookies from her?" This is how shady Republicans have always viewed the press: nosy pests flinging a lot of fact-based knowledge, which can be highly inconvenient if you're trying to perpetrate a big swindle, such as, "We really, really care about the middle class."

Just before Sarah started showing up at the podium, Trump drastically scaled back video feeds from the daily press briefings. Well, we don't want to suggest that a press secretary's looks are overly important to performing the job, but we can't help noting that with Sarah Huckabee Sanders audio-only conferences might be a good choice. When you walk, talk and look like an Asshole, the verdict is in. H

GLITCH PORN

Is it scrambled pay-per-view sex? Corrupt video? An acid flashback? Introducing glitch porn, a new lo-fi obsession in an HD world.

Gritty, grainy and distorted, glitch porn borrows heavily from vaporwave, an internet art form that fetishizes late '90s web design and a sort of digital surrealism. Adding hardcore to the mix gives porn lovers a trippy new way to experience their favorite content.

In an article from Vice's Motherboard, one Reddit user and moderator sums up the new phenomenon as a response to oversaturation. "In today's world it's so easy to see nudity and sex. It takes minimal effort to see 100s/1,000s of women naked, so maybe seeing them in a different way breathes new life into [the pics]." For explicit examples of glitch images, check out glitchp0rn.tumblr.com and this adults-only subreddit r/glitch_porn.

Artists abound, like Reddit user Altered_Data, who goes so far as to upload creations to actual porn sites. Quote: "I wanted to hack and remix the porn online visual presence and the porn industry aesthetic." For smut lovers, it's a proposition not unlike the one Neo faced in The Matrix: You take the blue pill, the story ends. You take the red pill, you stay in Wonderland and see how deep the rabbit hole goes.

LONG LIVE SEX!

Do you know what telomeres are? They are about to improve your sex life. If at times it seems like getting your lady into bed involves cajoling or bargaining or standing on your fucking head, then this news is for you. Turns out all you need is science. A recent study done by the University of California San Francisco proves that when your partner fucks you, she ages more slowly. Hell, you can sell her on sex as a rejuvenation treatment! Turns out that telomeres cap the ends of DNA strands, and when a woman has sex, the telomeres lengthen, slowing the aging process. According to the research, this happens no matter what type of sex she has. Good or bad, missionary or doggy, she still gets the benefits. The downside? It is unclear if the benefits apply to men.

If your partner doesn't fully believe your reaming rationale, remember the key word here is telomeres. Encourage her to read up on them. Short telomeres lead to health issues and decreased lifespan. But in order for sex to have the desired effect on their length, she needs to fuck at least once a week. Of course with those kinds of benefits, your lover might want to double or triple that frequency. Finally science proves that even bad sex is good for you!

THE REAL FAKE NEWS: BENEDICT ARNOLD IS INNOCENT

"It was a 20-minute meeting mainly about adoptions and the weather. Nothing came of it." —General Benedict Arnold

WASHINGTON, D.C.—A "treasure trove" of new documents discovered in the National Archives reveals that notorious American traitor Benedict Arnold (1741-1801) did not after all collude with the British during the Revolutionary War.

According to Presidential historian Kellyanne Conartist, the newly discovered documents prove that the traditional account is a "hoax" which for years has been completely misrepresented by "fake scholars" in the pay of George Washington's descendants.

Conartist admitted that in 1780 Arnold did indeed meet with spymaster Major John Andre and eight other British Army officers, but military matters "never came up, or at least not much." According to Arnold himself, she said, the meeting was "mainly to exchange season's greetings and other pleasantries about the weather."

Conartist noted that "alternative historical facts" showed that while some of the officers present "briefly" expressed an interest in the fortifications of West Point, which Arnold commanded at the time, "their curiosity was chiefly about the finer points of architectural design."

She added, "Few people know that Major Andre originally trained as an architect and was only interested in the fort's aesthetics. He cursorily examined the plans Arnold brought with him, commenting on their excellent condition and the skill and beauty of their design."

Conartist, who took a moment to comment on her own "striking personal beauty," stressed that "the purely architectural" aspect of the meeting lasted "less than 30 or 20 or perhaps even five minutes, if that long." Afterwards discussion turned to the matter of adoptions, and specifically whether Arnold might be adopted by King George III, for whom he had a high personal regard.

"Since travel in those days was complicated and expensive, some time was spent on how much Mr. Arnold would be compensated for his own outlay and his mode of transport," Conartist said. The "extremely modest" figure of £20,000 was arrived at. "It was all very innocent and of course perfectly proper," Conartist concluded, noting that in a well-known contemporary letter to the American people published in September 1780, Arnold said transparently: "Love to my country actuates my present conduct, however it may appear inconsistent to the world, who very seldom judge right of any man's actions."

DICK-OMETRICS

You've heard of biometrics, but one live-cam site is taking identification protocols far beyond retinal scans, into extremely intimate territory. CamSoda requests that its subscribers log in with their dick pic.

In an interview with CNET, the website assures users that their dick-ometrics ID procedure is in fact very real—and accurate. They claim that your "penis print" is unique, not unlike a fingerprint.

Why are they initiating this measure? Why not, apparently. The site is known for its PR stunts. But what about the matter of privacy? What is CamSoda doing to protect the sanctity and security of your fuckstick photo? Vice president Darren Press insists that the pictures are encrypted and never kept in image format.

As to the accuracy of their login system: "Right now it identifies penises with a confidence of about 76%. The goal is to get it above 95%. The differences in the penile state, however, make this more difficult. Girth, length, curve, vascularity are all affected by the level of arousal. At the moment we are focusing on erect penises as our go-to for login."

You could use someone else's prick pic, but it's not advised—unless you want to give that person complete access to your account and information. Just think warm thoughts, and get ready for your closeup.

PRISON PERKS

Rise of the machines? Seems like it was only a matter of time before drones made humans obsolete—specifically the brave men and women who keister drugs and SIM cards into penitentiaries. As reported by The Verge, a USA Today study found that drones have been used successfully to fly contraband into federal prisons over the last several years. Popular items include phones, narcotics and—surprise, surprise—porn.

What kinds of porn are prisoners consuming exactly? A 2016 Vice web article sheds some light on the topic. Original or photocopied adult magazines are very popular and even serve as currency. Similarly, bundles of explicit printed internet photos are popular, while a phone containing downloaded adult videos can sell for upward of $500. Some prisoners even rent out magazines to "serial jackers," while a pristine issue can fetch $200.

Smuggling via machine is not exactly a refined science. In 2014 a drone crashed in South Carolina attempting to fly weed into the hoosegow. But when it works, the payoff can be sweet: Last year prosecutors in Maryland convicted a recently released inmate and prisoner on charges of attempted drug distribution. Prior to being caught, they were netting a tidy $6,000 per drone drop.

TRUTH & DARE

THERE'S NOWHERE JIM NORTON WON'T GO FOR A LAUGH. GETTING HIS BARE ASS SPANKED BY ROBERT DE NIRO ON HIS NETFLIX SPECIAL MOUTHFUL OF SHAME? CHECK. SHARING WITH THE WORLD HIS PENCHANT FOR ANALINGUS AND SEXTING? YES. NONCHALANTLY CONFESSING TO ANYONE AND EVERYONE HIS FONDNESS FOR DATING TRANS GIRLS? ABSOLUTELY! HE'S BEEN A RADIO SHOW HOST, TELEVISION ACTOR AND ERSTWHILE MOVIE STAR. STILL, NORTON CONSIDERS HIMSELF A COMEDIAN FIRST. THE NOTORIOUS STAND-UP RECENTLY SAT DOWN WITH HUSTLER IN NEW YORK CITY TO TALK ABOUT THE IMPORTANCE OF TELLING THE TRUTH AND WHAT HE FINDS FUCKING FUNNY.

INTERVIEW BY T.S. FARLEY
PHOTOGRAPHY BY MARIUS BUGGE

HUSTLER: So what are you up to these days?
JIM NORTON: Radio, podcasts and stand-up: Jim Norton & Sam Roberts every morning, Channel 103 on Sirius XM. The Chip Chipperson Podacast on Riotcast Network Sunday nights. And I'm starting a new tour. Oh, yeah, I forgot, I do a UFC podcast twice a week with Matt Serra, Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Your new Chip Chipperson Podacast is a riot. Where did that come from?
That's a character I've been doing on the radio for years. Chip's a fucking idiot, and this is what happens when an idiot has a platform. [In whiny, lispy Chip voice] "Yo, what's up, cuz?" He tries to sound cool and hip, but he's a douche. At first I just did him to embarrass my girlfriends—like the waiter would come along, and they would order something, and I would say loud, as Chip, "How much is that?" They'd be so embarrassed. This one girlfriend was like, "Would you stop that! People think I fuck this guy!" When I got such a strong reaction from her, I realized there was something to it. People either love Chip or hate him, but the podcast is for the hardcore fans.

And your UFC podcast, how'd that happen?
I got into UFC through Joe Rogan in about '06 or '07. He'd come on the radio show and would bring fighters along. I think the first fighter I interviewed was Chuck Liddell, and he was such a bull. He was great, just sitting there, aaargh, aaargh, heavy breathing—you wanted to know more about this guy.

Plus you're always doing stand-up. What was your first European tour like?
I figured they'd hate me, since I have low self-esteem. But it was great, Oslo, Stockholm, Copenhagen, Amsterdam. I did Australia this year, Europe; I'm doing England this year. I'm 49, and I'm like, What are you waiting for, stupid? You're gonna die in 50 years. So go, tour.

Now tell us the going rate for an Amsterdam whore.
I didn't get one. I swear to God! I went into the Antwerp, Belgium, red-light district, and it was nice. I saw a girl in there for a few minutes, but I didn't fuck her. I just wanted the experience of walking into the door and seeing where they go, but then I came back out.

This is why they tell you never to meet your heroes, Jim.
It just doesn't feel right at this point in my life. There's all this talk about sex trafficking, and you can't not think about it after it's been talked about so much. The idea that I could be contributing to that got to me. I mean, I've spent so much money on prostitutes in my life. A lot, way too much! So I don't get girls I don't know anymore. Do I bring in girls that I know? Uh, yeah. There are certain people I know who are just dirty and who like making some extra money, and that's when the >> feminists got to back the fuck off. This woman can make a decision to do a little something on the side if she wants. Most sex workers I've talked to are very happy. I've spoken out in favor of them, and they say, "No one forced me to do this. I just wanted to make some money."

Tell us how you ended up in comedy?
It's the only thing that got me attention, and I've never been good at anything else. I was never comfortable with myself. There was always discomfort, feeling insecure, feeling like I wasn't good enough—like any comic will tell ya. Otherwise why would I be fucking tap dancing in front of people, begging them to like me?

What about the payoff, the laughter and applause?
It's great. Sooo great.

Do you ever still bomb onstage?
I bombed the other night. I was down at the Comedy Cellar, working on new material, and I fucking ate my balls. Oh, it was ugly. But I actually like that I have the ability to bomb. I respect that quality in myself, that I don't bail out when I'm doing new material. That's the only way you get better. And I actually like that I'm willing to stand there and eat a pile of shit.

You're known for your brutal frankness. Do you have a comic philosophy? For example, in Mouthful of Shame you say no one is really supporting transgender rights unless they wake up some morning with a sore asshole, asking, "Who am I?"
I wouldn't say I have a philosophy, but I would say the two responsibilities a comedian has are to be funny and to be honest. You don't have to be right. Too many comedians bog themselves down because they become obsessed with being right. Everyone wants to come off as some social genius, and it's like, shut up! What? Are you gonna educate the audience? My job is not to fucking educate the audience. I don't care what the audience thinks about who I sleep with or who I don't sleep with, who I date or who I don't date. My job is to tell the truth, but you got to make it funny. My job is not to preach about trans issues or trans rights. I try to make it funny so people are hearing the truth and they're laughing.

You've always been candid about your depression and low self-esteem, calling yourself a "piece of shit."
When I say I'm a piece of shit, that's how my mind talks to me. I'm just vocalizing how I hear myself all day. But it depends on how I say it too. Sometimes it's low self-esteem, but other times it's just acknowledging that I'm dirty. Like I fucked that girl but never called her—what a piece of shit! A lot of times I don't mean it as harshly as it sounds, but then there are times when I'm looking in the mirror and go, God, I'm lucky I don't have a shotgun right now.

Is there anything you will not discuss onstage?
There's no subject. There are a lot of things that are tasteless, but there's no subject that's off limits. If you can make a movie about it, make a show about it, write a book about it, you can do a joke about it. After 9/11 we all waited though. People were too sad, and the joke—where would you put the emphasis on a joke? Like, you couldn't make fun of people jumping out of the windows. You have to be careful as a comedian that you're not just trying to be a cunt on purpose. You really have to be trying to be funny or make a point or both.

What did you think of the shit-storm that Kathy Griffin stirred up with her decapitated Donald Trump head?
Kathy's a friend of mine, and I felt bad she got so much shit, because I really like her. It was a stupid thing to do, because any time you use a violent image of a politician, your point has to be 100% clear, and I didn't know what her point was. But I thought the blowback was a little much. I mean, Kathy's a funny comic, and she apologized. When she apologized, she was getting her dick kicked in on Twitter, but I really believed that she was sorry. I believed her, and I thought it should've ended there. It's like Bill Maher, he said something stupid, but so what? We make our living talking about controversial subjects and making fun of controversial subjects, and sometimes you're gonna step on fucking toes.

Is that what you thought about the Maher joke, when he said he wouldn't join some politician working in the fields because he saw himself as more of a "house nigger" instead?
Well, a white guy saying "house nigger" on TV is a rough sell. I do believe it was funny, but I talked to friends of mine, black comedians, and they were really bothered that Bill was comfortable enough to say that. I didn't want to see Bill get in trouble, but I guess the word does affect people in a way I, as a white guy, don't understand. The only time I use it now is when I'm quoting somebody. I used it in my recent special because I did some jokes about Hulk Hogan saying it, and I can't say, "Hulk Hogan said the N word" because I'm not a 13-year-old child. If you're gonna be a big boy and talk about something, just say it. But there's a difference being saying that and calling somebody that or saying it just to get away with it.

"I WOULD SAY THE TWO RESPONSIBILITIES A COMEDIAN HAS ARE TO BE FUNNY AND TO BE HONEST. YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE RIGHT."

Meanwhile, Steve Harvey was also in the news a couple months back, in trouble for telling some radio caller from Flint, Michigan, to "Enjoy your nice brown glass of water."
The fact the media would cover a comedian's improvised joke shows you that the 24-hour news cycle can eat a dick. Sickening. Can you imagine Walter Cronkite talking about that? "In the news today a comedian made a joke."

Speaking of eating a dick, let's talk about your sex life. Are you really into transgender women?
I've hooked up with a lot of trans girls. I'm very attracted to them, and

I would love to have a transgender girlfriend. I haven't at this point, but it's not because I'm uncomfortable doing it. It's just that you don't meet that many transgender women in real life.

Would you say, at this point, that you'd prefer to date a transgender woman?

No, I wouldn't say I'd prefer it, but I'm very open to it, and I certainly would do it. It's not a preference, because I'll meet a girl, and I'll be like, Fuck, I love this girl! Then I'll meet a trans girl and, Fuck, I love her too. Ah, I'm greedy, I'm greedy. Really, I want people who live in different states and don't have social media—that's what I want. [Laughs.]

In Mouthful of Shame you make a joke that having sex with a trans girl does not make one gay, but then you walk over to your stool to knock on wood. It was very funny, but is that what you believe?

There is a difference. Different doesn't mean better or worse; it's just different. You know, it's like you can't take a dick in your ass or your face and then run around and go, "I like girls!" Like, there's something else there. With all the things I've done in my life, I'd be a dope if I didn't say that.

You also said in the special that you like a fat ass more than a white guy should, but aren't the ideas of a fat ass and a trans girl mutually exclusive?

No, all kinds of transgender women have fat asses. There are as many different kinds of bodies on trans women as there are on, quote/unquote, cis women. There's the same body variation.

Cis women?

That's the phrase they use, because trans women don't want to be called fake women, but the bottom line is that cis means genetic girl. The reason to me there's such a struggle with this is because our culture says different means better or worse, instead of just you're this and I'm that and it's okay. Ya know, you're tall; I'm short—it is what it is. It's not rude. It's just a statement of fact.

Another sex question: Is it true, sir, that you consider yourself a cunnilingus aficionado?

I love doing it, but I can't say aficionado because there are probably plenty of women who would say that "This guy fucking eats pussy like a frog." I mean the way I do it, I put my pinky in, and I leave it still, and I just keep licking and saying, "Are you close? Are you close? Are you close?" [Laughs.]

How'd you do with girls when you were young?

I did not do well with girls at all. Oh, I struck out hard when I was young. I had no rap. I was horrible. That's why I've been on a rampage ever since I got known as a comedian, because I finally met girls.

So women do go for funny guys?

They do. So many girls I've hooked up with have been hotter than I deserve. Most of the girls. If life was fair, I'd be fucking a woman who resembled me. I've batted out of my league so many times, and it's all because I was funny. Like Bree Olson, that was only because I was funny. I haven't talked to her in a long time, but I really like her. I would have married her at one point, after we had sex. If she would have said, "Let's get married," I would've flown her to Vegas and not made radio the next morning.

Speaking of funny guys, I just watched Norm Macdonald's new special, and like you, he did a joke about blaming some random guy in a suicide note. Did Norm steal your joke?

No. I read that on Twitter, and Norm's not a thief, and I'm not a thief. Sometimes all these comedians are doing specials the same year, and sometimes you just say the same thing. My special was done before Norm's was, but I guarantee you his was shot before mine aired. He didn't watch my special, so no one stole anyone's joke. Norm's a comedian with integrity, and I know I have integrity. You always have to know where your joke comes from—you have to be able to trace the origin of it to know it's pure and that it's your thing, which is why I don't watch comedy. I just refuse to do it. Sure, if I'm walking through the room and Colin Quinn's onstage, I'll watch it, but I know he's gonna have funnier Trump stuff than me, and I know his stuff's gonna be smarter than mine, so why put myself through that? It's like if you're a porn actor and the guy with the biggest dick in the world is there, you don't sit there and watch him and admire him; you fucking walk >> through the room quickly. It's like George Foreman hitting the heavy bag in When We Were Kings. Every day Ali would walk by, and he'd never look at Foreman hitting the heavy bag, because you don't want to see the guy who's gonna punch you in the stomach—you don't want to see what he's doing to that bag. And I don't want to see what guys like Colin Quinn or Dave Attell are doing onstage.

We're all doing a Trump reference; we're all talking about relationships, suicide. There's so many comics now, you're watching 50 people a year do one-hour blocks of material, and how many different things can you talk about? Marriage, breakup, relationships, ethnicity, nationality. There's only so much.

You regularly make fun of people onstage, like Kim Kardashian, Charlie Sheen, Whoopi Goldberg and Magic Johnson in your last special. Anyone ever get mad at your smart mouth?

No, because what are they gonna say? They're in the conversation. Charlie Sheen, he announced he had HIV. I didn't say "You're garbage" because of it. I didn't wish him bad. I didn't say I wish Magic died. I love Magic Johnson. What? C'mon, I can't make a Magic Johnson reference?

When I was a kid, I had a couple of fights, but I was always good at talking my way out of it. But if anyone came to me and asked why I'm talking about them, I'd say, "I'm a comic!" I make fun of people, but I make fun of myself worse. There's nothing I've said about anyone that I haven't said a lot worse about myself. I mean, I look in the mirror and say, "Faggot!" That's true. I've had that conversation many times alone, "You fucking cocksucker! You faggot!" angrily with myself, alone. Yeah, so I don't care what anyone thinks about what I say about them onstage.

Speaking of fights, in Mouthful of Shame you told us that you won your last fight when the guy grabbed you by the shirt and you said, "I think I'm gonna come!" That's hilarious!
I'll tell you where that joke came from. Matt Serra, my partner on the UFC podcast, was joking with me one time and said he was gonna grab me and show me this thing, this UFC move. I was like, "Okay, I'm just afraid I might come…" And Matt laughed, and I laughed, and then I reworked that and put it in the act.

As much as you love UFC, do you train for it yourself?
I was thinking of trying it, but my exhaustion level from sleep apnea is so bad, I haven't yet. Plus the idea of men rubbing their faces on me and sweating, ugh. It's odd—if you got a dress on, you can shove your balls in my face, but if you're sweating and doing jiujitsu, "Ewww, you're a fucking creep, get off me! I'm not gay, fella!" [Laughs.] H

I'm drawn to men who are dominant, both in life and in the bedroom, someone who will order for you at the table. The guys I go for are comfortable, smart and controlling—in a good way. It's more about personality and wit than physical attributes. Whenever I have any free time, scuba diving, longboarding and smoking a hookah are my go-tos.

"I have a BDSM pet fantasy. Basically I'm locked in a lavish cage and only used for sex. I have a collar and leash, and I'm made to crawl on my knees to pleasure my master. I get tied and bound, fucked and sucked, used but not abused. My master treats me like I'm on a fucking sex pedestal."

SUPPRESS THE VOTE!

REPUBLICAN STATES SENT VOTER INFORMATION FILES TO KOBACH, EVEN WHILE CLAIMING THEY WOULD "RESIST" HIS DEMAND.

A national outcry followed the request from Kris Kobach, vice chair of President Donald Trump's Advisory Commission on Election Integrity, that state election officials provide him with a long list of personal information on every voter, including party affiliation, date of birth, last four digits of Social Security number and more.

Election officials in 44 states said they would refuse to comply with the June 28 written request from Kobach, whose advisory commission was created in May by Trump via executive order. Trump has made repeated and so-far unsubstantiated claims that millions voted illegally in the 2016 election.

"They can go jump in the Gulf of Mexico, and Mississippi is a great state to launch from," responded Mississippi's Republican secretary of state Delbert Hosemann.

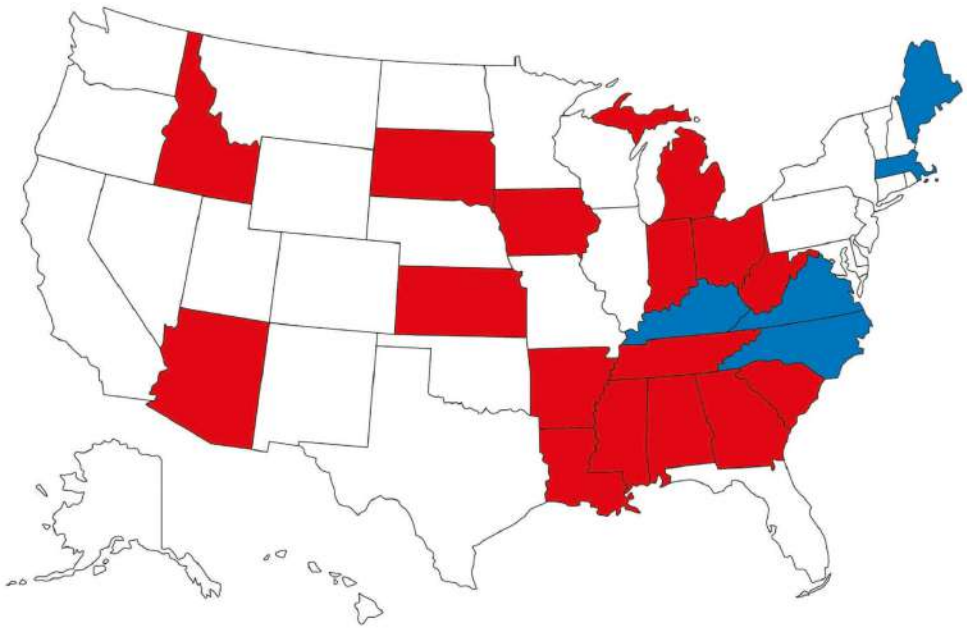
"The President's commission has quickly politicized its work by asking states for an incredible amount of voter data that I have, time and time again, refused to release," said Louisiana's secretary of state Tom Schedler.

To the contrary, Schedler and voting officials from 15 other Republican states, the majority of those allegedly "resisting" Kobach's demand, have already shared detailed voter files with Kobach in his capacity as secretary of state of Kansas.

Records obtained by The Progressive from the Kansas secretary of state office showed that Schedler turned over nearly 3 million voter files to Kobach earlier this year, including voter birth dates and Social Security information.

In Mississippi, Hosemann turned over the state's entire voter rolls to Kobach, some 2,092,886 files. Each file includes voter name, last four digits of Social Security number, voting address and voting history.

Kobach, who has recently announced his candidacy for Governor of Kansas, has indicated the lists will be used to remove illegal voters. But voting rights advocates say the goal is actually to allow fewer people to vote.



States with a Republican as secretary of state (labeled red) that have indicated to CNN that they will "resist" Kris Kobach's demand for full voter files—but have already given him those files. Four states with a Democrat as secretary of state (labeled blue) have made the same inaccurate claim. In June North Carolina's Democratic governor ordered his Board of Elections not to hand over voter files to Kobach—but the Republican-controlled board had already turned over 6,745,639 voter files. Photo illustration by HUSTLER. Map by Daniel Kaesler/Alamy.

Twenty-one states listed by CNN as refusing Kobach his demands for voter files have already turned over voter files to Kobach's office.

"The lists will almost certainly be used to...suppress the vote of citizens of color," says Dee Hunter of the newly formed Civil Rights Center. Hunter's group is part of a coalition including the ACLU, Common Cause, the NAACP of Georgia, Reverend Jesse Jackson of the Rainbow/PUSH Coalition and other organizations calling for a halt to the expansion of Kobach's Crosscheck system.

Voter lists from Mississippi and 27 other states were turned over to Kobach beginning years ago as part of a voter-list purge program >> called Interstate Crosscheck, Hunter explains. The list aims to identify Americans registered in more than one state and intending to vote twice in one election, which is a crime. Any names identified as potential double-voters receive a postcard which, if unanswered, could lead to removal from the rolls.

According to a Rolling Stone analysis of data obtained from states participating in Interstate Crosscheck, as many as 1.1 million names were purged from voter rolls before the 2016 election.

According to database expert Mark Swedlund, an astonishing one in six Hispanics and one in nine African-Americans are on Kobach's "potential double-registered" list of 7 million suspects in the 28 states.

But Crosscheck functions by merely matching the first name and last name of voters in the 28 Crosscheck states. The screenshot below, of the Georgia-Virginia suspect list created by Kobach, shows that Barbara ANN Jackson of Georgia is identified as potentially the same voter as Barbara FAYE Jackson of Virginia. Similarly, Billy RAY Jackson may be the same voter as Billy MANUEL Jackson JR.

The matches may seem ludicrous, but all these voters could lose their vote. Swedlund calls Kobach's approach a "simplistic, childish" matching algorithm. He says, "If your name is Jose Hernandez, you're likely suspected of voting in 28 states!"

Indeed, in Virginia, at least 12% of voters on Kobach's list lost their votes before the last election. Virginia has purged tens of thousands of voters from the state's rolls using the Crosscheck suspect list.

I spoke with Kobach last year at a Republican ice-cream social and asked him about Crosscheck potentially misidentifying voters as duplicate registrants. "Our system would not yield this match," Kobach insisted. But when I showed him that Crosscheck contained literally millions of mismatches, he jumped up, clutching his vanilla ice cream—and ran for it.

He did call later to answer my questions, and stated he saw no problem in Crosscheck's approach "to get the widest list possible" in the hunt for illegal voters. H

"A lot of guys in porn are older, which is perfect for me because I prefer older men. It's actually come to where when I work with a younger dude, I don't vibe with him as much. On set I like anal, but in my personal life I usually go for vaginal sex. I also love foreplay—especially oral and playing with my ass. Sex isn't always just about sex. It's about the buildup, which is the best part."

Tom had been dealing with premature-ejaculation issues for years. Finally he decided to see a doctor, who suggested, "When you feel like you're about to ejaculate, try startling yourself." So on his way home Tom stopped at a sporting-goods store and bought a starter pistol.

That night he and his wife had just started 69ing when suddenly Tom felt the urge to come. He quickly grabbed the gun and fired it into the ceiling.

The next day he went back to the doctor and explained that he'd used a starter pistol to delay his climax.

"How'd that go?" the doc inquired.

"Not very well," Tom answered. "When I fired the pistol, my wife shit on my face and bit three inches off my pecker, and my neighbor came out of the closet with his hands in the air."

Macho Joe walked into a singles bar, looked around and then sat down next to a very attractive girl. "How would you feel about the two of us engaging in a little oral sex?" he asked.

"It depends," the girl replied. "Your face or mine?"

A lonely woman went to a pet store and bought a Chihuahua to be her companion. But after a couple of weeks she returned to the store with the pooch.

Recognizing her, the owner asked, "Is something wrong, ma'am?"

"Yes, there is!" the woman exclaimed. "Every time I get down on my hands and knees to scrub a floor, this little pervert you sold me starts humping me from behind!"

"I see," the concerned store owner said. "I suppose you'd like to return the Chihuahua and get a refund."

"No," she replied. "But I would like to know if I can trade it in for a Great Dane."

HUSTLER Wisdom: The first thing a man looks for in a woman is her heart. It's not his fault that tits are in front of a woman's heart.

A married man was having an affair with his secretary. One day at work the urge overcame them, and they took off to her place, where they made passionate love all afternoon.

Exhausted from the wild sex, the lovebirds dozed off and didn't wake up till around 8 p.m. As the man quickly threw on his clothes, he told his secretary to take his shoes outside and rub them through some grass and dirt. Mystified, she nonetheless complied. When she came back inside, her boss slipped on his shoes and kissed her goodbye.

"Where the hell have you been?!" the cheater's wife demanded when he finally got home.

"Darling, I can't lie to you anymore," he replied. "I've been having an affair with my secretary. We made mad love all afternoon and fell asleep. Once I woke up, I got dressed and hurried home."

His wife looked down at his shoes and snarled, "You lying bastard! You've been playing golf again on a workday!"

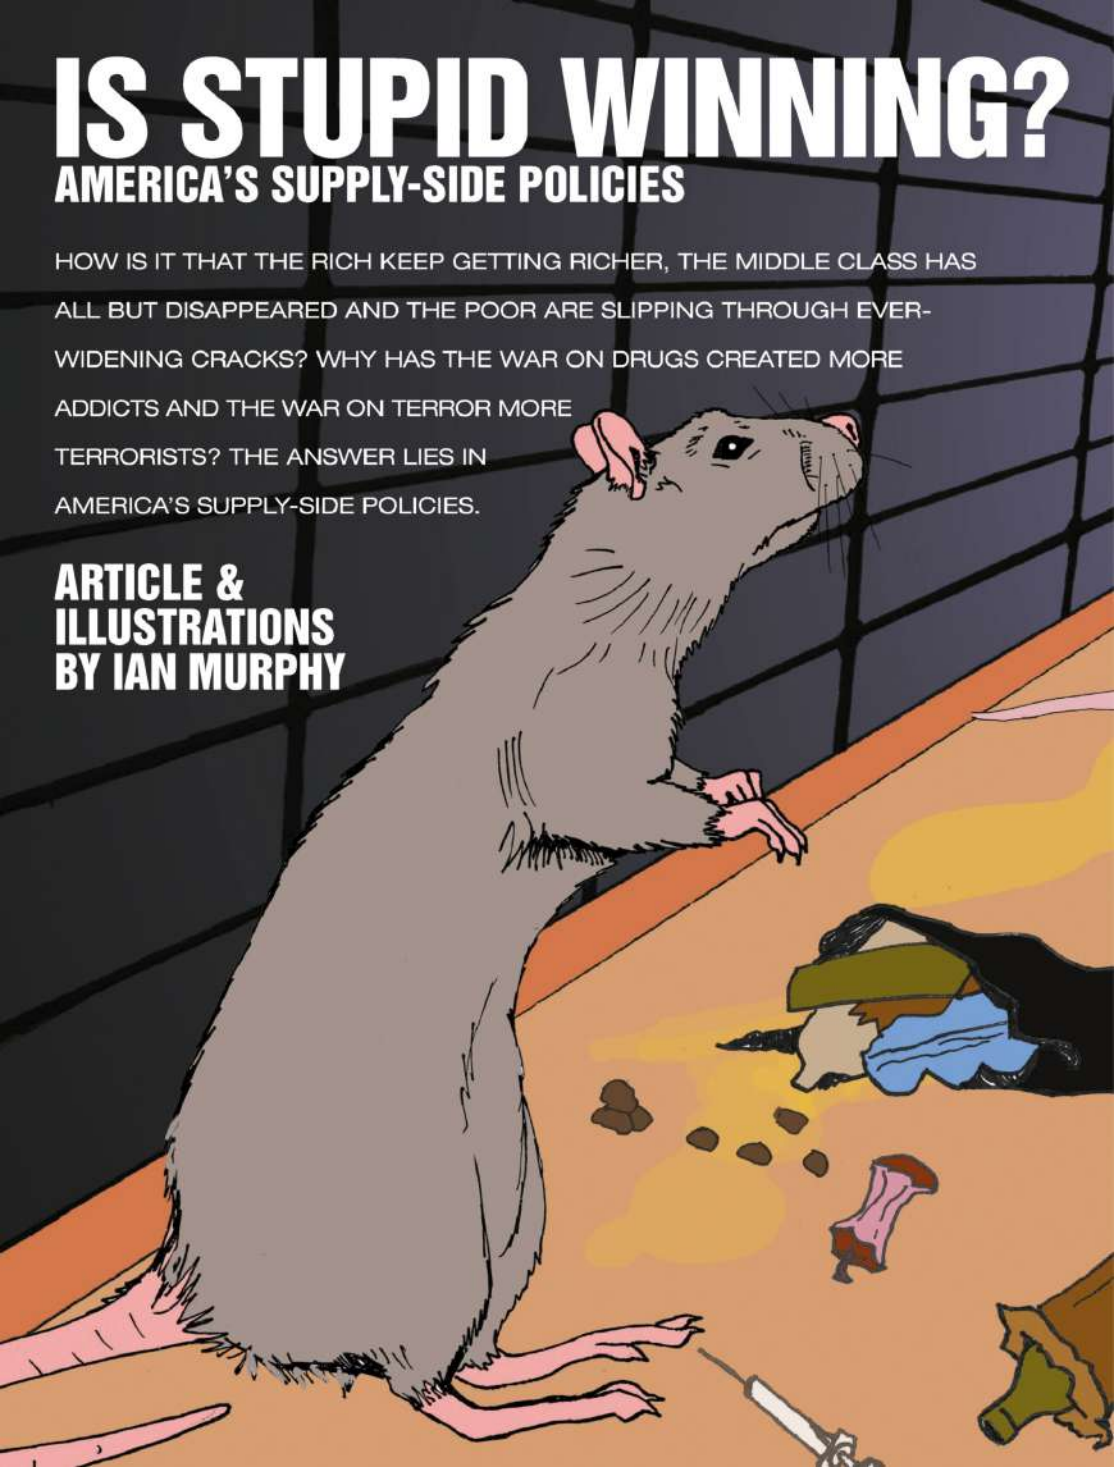
AMERICA'S SUPPLY-SIDE POLICIES

HOW IS IT THAT THE RICH KEEP GETTING RICHER, THE MIDDLE CLASS HAS ALL BUT DISAPPEARED AND THE POOR ARE SLIPPING THROUGH EVER-WIDENING CRACKS? WHY HAS THE WAR ON DRUGS CREATED MORE ADDICTS AND THE WAR ON TERROR MORE TERRORISTS? THE ANSWER LIES IN AMERICA'S SUPPLY-SIDE POLICIES.

ARTICLE & ILLUSTRATIONS BY IAN MURPHY



Let's begin with Ronald Reagan, B-movie actor and corporate shill cum President. The current Republican demigod is admired mostly for his charismatic role in redistributing America's wealth into the hands of an elite class of wealthy oligarchs. "The Gipper" helped usher in what is known as supply-side economics, wherein policies like tax cuts and reduced regulations favor the privileged, while being framed as good for the average citizen. Before the advent of this "trickle-down" theory, people didn't say, "demand-side economics," because it's redundant. Supply-side economics is a self-evident contradiction, a form of cultural Stockholm syndrome that betrays the ugliness of our values.

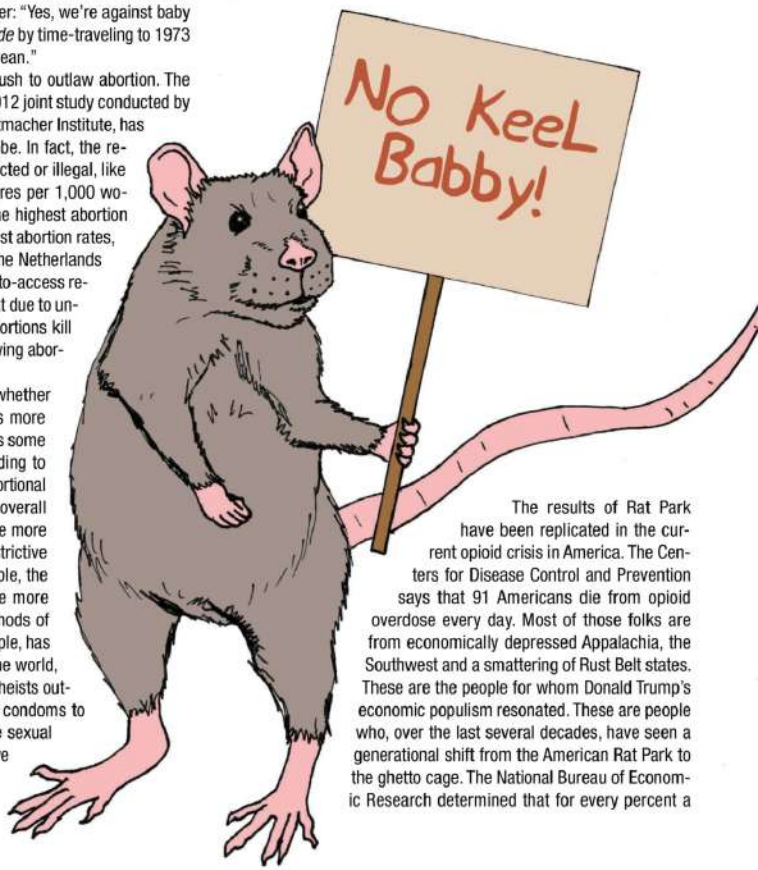
This approach to economics has not only created a vast disparity in wealth and enabled the corrupt system of buying legislation through campaign donations—worse since Citizens United—it's also furthered a fundamental confusion in our society regarding supply versus demand. The Average Joe or Jane just doesn't get it; so many Americans support poverty-making policies and backward solutions to social problems that are in direct opposition to their own economic self-interests.

Perhaps the hottest of hot-button issues today is abortion. Ask your Trump-loving family and friends, "Are you pro-life? What does that mean? And what can be done on a policy level to reduce the amount of abortions in America?" The stock answer: "Yes, we're against baby murder, and we should overturn Roe v. Wade by time-traveling to 1973 in Neil Gorsuch's wicked-awesome DeLorean."

But there's an egregious flaw in the push to outlaw abortion. The procedure's legal status, according to a 2012 joint study conducted by the World Health Organization and the Guttmacher Institute, has no effect on abortion rates across the globe. In fact, the regions where the procedure is highly restricted or illegal, like South America (an estimated 47 procedures per 1,000 women of childbearing age), tend to have the highest abortion rates in the world. And areas with the lowest abortion rates, like Western Europe (18 per 1,000) and the Netherlands (5 per 1,000), tend to have legal and easy-to-access reproductive care. It should also be noted that due to unregulated and unsafe practices, illegal abortions kill roughly 70,000 women per year, so outlawing abortion is not exactly a "pro-life" position.

We tend to think of it as corollary, but whether abortion is legal is not really relevant. It's more an indicator of a country's religiosity (minus some outliers, like China), which in turn, according to the Pew Research Center, is inversely proportional to a country's economic well-being and overall standard of living. The poorer a people, the more religious; the more religious, the more restrictive they are on abortion. The wealthier a people, the better educated; the better educated, the more likely to pursue scientifically proven methods of attaining goals. The Netherlands, for example, has one of the highest standards of living in the world, and it's one of the few nations in which atheists outnumber theists. The Dutch also hand out condoms to students and provide them with adequate sexual education. In America, on the other hand, we teach our kids that anything short of abstinence will inexorably lead to disease, death and an eternity of flaming-pitchfork-based torment.

Over a large swath of seemingly disparate issues, economics plays a crucial role in a nation's overall attitude and health. To illustrate the point, we'll look to the results of an experiment called Rat Park, published in 1981, conducted by Canadian psychologist Bruce Alexander and his colleagues at Simon Fraser University. Their study involved four groups of rat populations, two extremely different habitats and a choice between regular water and water infused with morphine. The first group of rats lived in crowded, austere cages—a rat ghetto, basically—for the duration of the 80-day experiment. They drank the hell out of the morphine solution. The second group of rats was raised in the titular Rat Park—a sorta swanky rat paradise, the proverbial gated community with access to stimulating toys and plenty of space to stretch out. They overwhelming preferred the plain water. The third group was moved from the ghetto to Rat Park at 65 days old. Though some dependence lingered, their morphine appetites fell precipitously. The fourth group was moved from the luxurious Rat Park to the rat ghetto at 65 days old. Can you guess what happened to them? Right. They quickly became junkies, hell-bent on escaping their new, supershitty lot in life, however briefly.



The results of Rat Park have been replicated in the current opioid crisis in America. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says that 91 Americans die from opioid overdose every day. Most of those folks are from economically depressed Appalachia, the Southwest and a smattering of Rust Belt states. These are the people for whom Donald Trump's economic populism resonated. These are people who, over the last several decades, have seen a generational shift from the American Rat Park to the ghetto cage. The National Bureau of Economic Research determined that for every percent a county's unemployment rises, it sees 3.6% more deaths from opioid overdose (7% more opioid-related emergency room visits).

Doctors overprescribed; pain pill manufacturers downplayed the dangers of their products; and we're now dialing back the OxyContin free-for-all. While it may seem a thoughtful policy, limiting prescription opioids is another wrong-headed attempt to affect behavior by controlling supply. As we saw with abortion, it's more about demand. Many who are cut off from prescription opioids—due to overzealous, puritanical regulation or the ruination of American healthcare under Trump—turn to a much cheaper alternative in heroin. It's worth noting that according to data collected between 2002 and 2012 by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, 75% of new heroin users started out with a prescribed fix. This is vast departure from historic trends.

Controlling supply seems like common sense, but that's what our draconian War on Drugs has been about for the last 50 years, from busting low-level dealers and users to destroying large swaths of Colombian wilderness under the auspices of the U.N. Has that worked? Hell, no. What it has done is fill our prisons. The United States has the largest prison population per capita in the entire world. Roughly half of our shamefully huge federal prison population bought their cells with drugs. Not only has this been devastating to American families, especially our black and brown communities; it has done nothing to curb drug use nationally. Incidentally, we saw some relief from this disastrous zero-tolerance idiocy under Obama's watch, but Trump's attorney general—and Klan-adjacent Keebler elf understudy—Jeff Sessions is promising a return to the "good ol' days" of Nixon-Reagan overly punitive sanctimony.

Again, whether it's abortion or drugs, outlawing a thing makes it exponentially more dangerous due to lack of oversight. Fentanyl, a synthetic opioid 50 to 100 times more potent than morphine, is the equivalent of a back-alley abortion. Addicts have no idea what they're getting when they drift from prescribed fixes to street junk. Now heroin users risk buying carfentanil too, a man-made opioid used as an elephant sedative, literally, that is 100 times more powerful than fentanyl. From 2014 to 2015 alone, the CDC reports that deaths caused by synthetic opioids, minus methadone, jumped by over 72%.

But surely we can't regulate hard drugs. Well, why not? There were only 379 combat-related deaths in the Spanish-American War; yet the U.S. suffered over 5,000 casualties total, due mostly to Chicago's unregulated meatpacking industry, which supplied our military with tons of rotten, formaldehyde-soaked beef. Although Chipotle seems intent on inspiring the next Upton Sinclair, and Trump wants to turn back the clock to the "good ol' days" of preventable consumer death, we mostly learned the lessons of unregulated food stuffs. But we place little moral judgment on eating. We do, however, enjoy condemning addicts for their supposed moral weakness. That stigma alone is destructive.

In 1999 Portugal was mired in its own war on drugs and losing more people to overdose than any country in Europe. A full one percent of its population was addicted to heroin. In 2001, rather than redoubling their futile policing efforts, they decided to try something novel—complete decriminalization of all drugs (up to a ten-day supply). Worldwide, Chicken Littles warned of Portugal's imminent doom. Sixteen years later the results of the experiment are in, and the sky has not fallen. What did fall, however, is Portugal's drug use. Since decriminalization, the number of addicts has dropped 50%, and overdose deaths are a mere one-fifth of what they were.

Again it would be misleading to suggest this was accomplished purely through decriminalization. It required a national shift in paradigm, zeitgeist and certainly other ten-dollar words. Portugal redirected its funding of a traditional police-focused drug war into rehab and >> education programs. Lifting the societal stigma of addiction through decriminalization has also been credited with a huge increase in those willing to seek treatment.

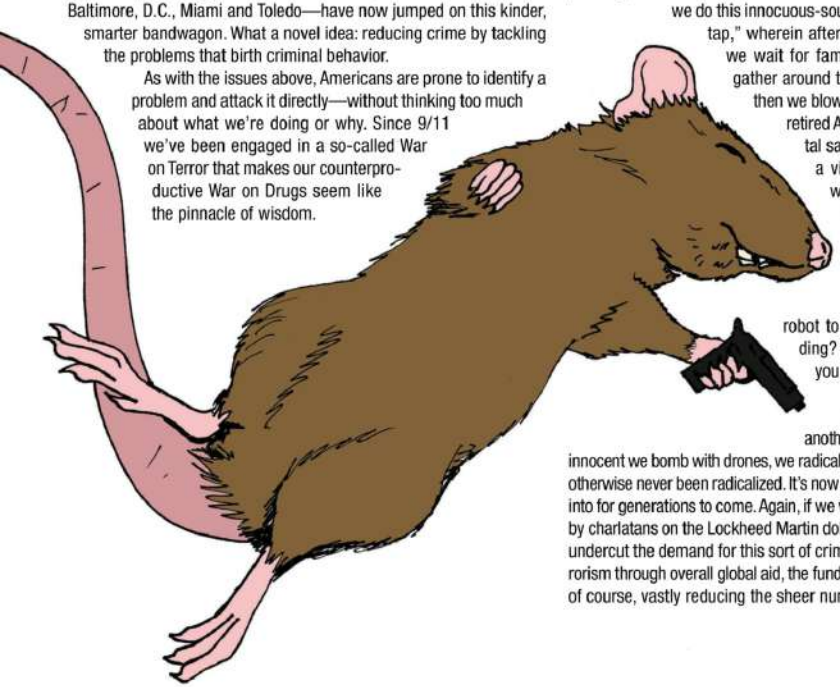
Americans still see drugs as a moral evil, as we once did alcohol. Prohibition was an unmitigated disaster. It did little to curb American's "immoral" appetites, forcing alcohol costs up, the quality and safety of booze down and causing a huge spike in organized crime. That we fail to see the parallels between booze and drugs is a disheartening signal of America's victim-blaming moral stagnation.

If Attorney General Sessions is representative of Americans' Old Testament outlook, we think that drugs cause crime and gun violence, when in reality it's poverty that allows the illegal drug trade to thrive. Americans demand drugs, the black market supplies, and gun-toting gangs come with the supply, since its very illegality demands an extra-legal means for meeting the need.

Just as a few cities around the world have begun to focus on economic demand with universal basic income experiments, Richmond, California, has taken a wiser, turn-the-other-cheek tack with crime. By actually paying a stipend to its newly released prisoners, they've shrunk the demand for criminal behavior in their community, rather than the traditionally futile method of supposedly "reducing" the supply of criminals. Following the city's success across a broad spectrum of indicators, from drug crime to homicide rates, other American cities—Baltimore, D.C., Miami and Toledo—have now jumped on this kinder, smarter bandwagon. What a novel idea: reducing crime by tackling the problems that birth criminal behavior.

As with the issues above, Americans are prone to identify a problem and attack it directly—without thinking too much about what we're doing or why. Since 9/11 we've been engaged in a so-called War on Terror that makes our counterproductive War on Drugs seem like the pinnacle of wisdom.



Our foolhardy misadventures in Afghanistan and Iraq may feel emotionally satisfying, but our terrorism-fighting efforts have been about as productive as a skin cancer patient trying to punch the sun. According to the Global Terrorism Index from the Institute for Economics & Peace, deaths from terrorism worldwide have skyrocketed from well under 5,000 in 2000 to over 30,000 in 2014. This is due, in large part, to our militaristic destabilization of Iraq.

To recap: We invaded a country that had fuck-all to do with the 9/11 terror attacks. We were not "greeted as liberators," and we created a massive power vacuum. In a Field of Dreams-type prophecy fulfillment, that void was soon exploited by al-Qaeda in Iraq. That group morphed into ISIS. In 2016, speaking about ISIS, then-CIA chief John Brennan told the Senate Intelligence Committee "our efforts have not reduced the group's terrorism capability and global reach."

WE THINK THAT DRUGS CAUSE CRIME AND GUN VIOLENCE, WHEN IN REALITY IT'S POVERTY THAT ALLOWS THE ILLEGAL DRUG TRADE TO THRIVE.

Our military objective was to diminish the supply of terrorists—as if there were a fixed amount. Go figure—the occupations of Iraq and Afghanistan, Abu Ghraib, Guantanamo Bay, CIA black sites, and an eight-country, years-long drone assault have done little to dissuade potential jihadists from their cause. Weird.

We're fighting a war of ideas with bullets and bombs. A 2012 joint study between New York University and Stanford estimates that for every one likely terrorist we've blown up in Pakistan, we've sent 49 perfectly innocent people to meet their death. That's largely because we do this innocuous-sounding thing called the "double tap," wherein after bombing a terrorist suspect, we wait for family, friends and neighbors to gather around the smoldering wreckage, and then we blow them up too. No wonder now-retired Army General Stanley McChrystal said that "[drones] are hated on a visceral level, even by people who've never seen one or seen the effects of one." The drone program is a perfect terrorist recruitment tool. I mean, how would you feel about a country that sent a flying robot to blow up your cousin's wedding? I guess it depends on whether you were invited.

For every one—real or merely suspected—terrorist we kill, another takes his place, and for every innocent we bomb with drones, we radicalize many more who would have otherwise never been radicalized. It's now a cycle of violence we're locked into for generations to come. Again, if we were smarter, and not governed by charlatans on the Lockheed Martin dole, we'd be looking into ways to undercut the demand for this sort of criminal activity we refer to as terrorism through overall global aid, the funding of education programs and, of course, vastly reducing the sheer number of people we blow up.

So why do Americans stand for it? Why do so many of us go along with the greedy politicians, those corporate interest shadows, and approve of policies and ideas that make everything worse? Well, the easy answer is that we're dolts. The hard answer is, as one might expect, harder.

Yale Law School professor and communication researcher Dan Kahan has conducted numerous fascinating studies. Perhaps most famously he demonstrated that self-identified Democrats with a mere high school education were less likely to "believe in" human-made global warming than college-educated Democrats. No surprise there. With more education, one would expect overall higher scientific literacy. Counterintuitively, it was the opposite across the political spectrum, with self-identified college-educated Republicans less likely to "believe in" human-made global warming than those with only high school diplomas.

If an opinion is integral to one's personal and political identity—like Republicans who believe that global warming is a hoax—further education only teaches people how to better rationalize their preexisting bias (confirmation bias). People love calling each other stupid on the internet, but it's more complicated than that. Someone can be the Ben Carson of brain surgery while also being the Ben Carson of, well, everything else.

An undying, uncritical belief in the ever-illusive American Dream is integral to our national identity, so when our fellow citizens fail to achieve that Dream, we view it as a moral failing—a moral failing that leads to many other moral failings, like abortion, drugs and crime. So while many profess to wanting to end these cultural scourges, most aren't willing to look into alternative ways of dealing with them. We may tell ourselves that punitive measures will stem our social ills and that poor people deserve their dreary lot in life, but there exists a preponderance of evidence that undercuts this worldview.

Freud called sublimation an advanced defense mechanism by which people channel their darker, primal desires into ones deemed acceptable to society. So your "pro-life" uncle isn't really a misogynist piece of shit who wants more women to die from unsafe abortions; he just, like, super-cares about babies. Jeff Sessions, despite all available evidence, isn't actually a racist, inhumane piece of shit; he thinks a return to the harshest policies of the War on Drugs will help people (like those in the private prison industry). The last three administrations weren't truly heedless warmongers pandering to a bloodthirsty, Islamophobic electorate; they were nobly battling terrorism through conventional warfare. And you didn't really buy this magazine to ogle naked ladies while taking a dump in a gas station shitter; you bought it solely for the articles.

Practical social solutions to our problems are fairly straightforward. Identifying fixes to the underlying psychological mechanisms that make people resist those practical solutions would take far more column inches than I'm allowed. So on that note, I now return you to your regularly scheduled masturbation. H

SUGAR BABIES LOVE THEIR SUGAR DADDIES

HUSTLER VIDEO. DIRECTOR: OTTO BAUER. STARRING: MARSHA MAY, GIA PAIGE, LUCY DOLL, SYDNEY COLE, SUBIL ARCH, AARON WILCOXXX, RICHIE BLACK, RYAN DRILLER, DERRICK PIERCE & JOHN STRONG.

"Mo' money, mo' honey" is the underlying principle of Sugar Babies Love Their Sugar Daddies. Kept, young hotties maintain a plush lifestyle the best way they know how. Fresh-faced brunette Gia Paige meets up with her gym-rat suitor in a secluded park. Paige has modest tits and plump, rubbery butt cheeks that bounce like twin volleyballs. The wide-eyed wonder takes her man's beef-bulb to the tonsils, then rides him reverse-cowgirl-style to the soundtrack of gratifyingly squishy noises with each bounce. Paige's girl-gulch is fingered to a gushing squirt before her enticing glutes are slimed with jizz. Angel-faced brunette Lucy Doll stares directly into her man's eyes as her mouth is filled with cock. The skinny twerp she's paired with seems a little young to be in the sugar daddy category; perhaps he's one of those douchebag internet millionaires who are due for a Department of Justice investigation, Martin Shkreli-style. The real star of this show is Sydney Cole, a super-willowy dirty-blonde who looks like she took a wrong turn on her way to a mainstream modeling gig. Cole takes a dicking on a playground merry-go-round, which is a nice touch, but hardly necessary—she's hot enough to make any guy dizzy as is. JULES JORDAN VIDEO. DIRECTOR: CHRIS STREAMS. STARRING: ANGEL SMALLS, HARLEY JADE, BAILEY BROOKE, JILL KASSIDY, MANUEL FERRARA, STEVE HOLMES, MICK BLUE, CHRIS STROKES & MARKUS DUPREE.

The word glamorous can mean different things to different people. The definition doesn't usually extend to "stuffing a chick's dung-dropper with enough meat to feed a small village for a month," but Young & Glamorous 9 stretches the meaning of the word along with its starlets' colons. Exhibit A: Angel Smalls, a strawberry blonde with alabaster skin and tits like the muffins you buy at a discount bakery. What Smalls lacks up top, however, she makes up for in carnal spirit and anal capacity. The girl's roughed up by a couple of goons, with not a single lick applied to her pussy before it's depth-charged with cock. A stocking is stretched over her head, making her look like a cross between a bank robber and an off-brand superhero. Smalls is tossed around like a teddy bear before she's subjected to a double-anal, and not a casual one either; by scene's end her asshole resembles a pulsating portal to another dimension. Elsewhere, Harley Jade is anally assailed by a stick-thin hillbilly who sports muttonchop sideburns, a tree branch sprouting from his groin and the lazy drawl of Wilford Brimley on a cough-syrup bender. The Appalachian ass-marauder oils up Jade's glutes and renders them crimson with a series of hearty slaps before drilling for fortune between them dirty hills. Bust out the moonshine, because the party's on; Young & Glamorous 9 leaves poopers packed and viewers' ball sacs empty. —P.D.R.

AXEL BRAUN PRODUCTIONS. DIRECTOR: RIKKI BRAUN. STARRING: RILEY STEELE, ABELLA DANGER, CHARLES DERA, TONI RIBAS, MR. PETE, ERIC JOHN, SCOTT LYONS & CHAD DIAMOND.

Variety can be the spice of life, but sometimes nothing satisfies like a single slab of prime meat. Riley Goes Gonzo 2 purports to be that slab, billed as a "hot, stylish showcase" for blond, bright-eyed vixen Riley Steele. Unfortunately, this dish is lukewarm at best. The video starts with a side dish of snizz, in the generally unimpressive form of Abella Danger. Danger's nice tits aside, she isn't anything to write home about; if she was your waitress at the strip club, your only desire would be that she made correct change. Nonetheless, Steele gamely tries to make the scene worthwhile, digging her thumb into Danger's furry gash like it was a vending-machine coin slot that refuses to cough up the quarter it owes her. Despite the abundant pussylicking and rimming—in a not particularly hygienic order—the scene leaves the viewer's appetite unsated. Next up, Steele commingles with a mustachioed slimeball who looks like he moonlights as a loan shark's collection goon. He's gratifyingly rough with Steele, fervently fucking her face and putting her in a wrestler's hold, wrapping his forearm around her neck as he pumps away from behind. From that point on, however, Riley Goes Gonzo 2 is an express train to Snooze City. There's a soft-focus bathtub scene in which Steele lazily dicks herself with a dildo among many soapy bubbles and a threeway where Steele's sphincters somehow go unpoked, despite the perfect opportunity for a double penetration. Riley Goes Gonzo 2 ultimately goes nowhere.

Besides painting and drawing, the 5-foot-7 eye-catcher digs camping, fishing and "chilling naked, watching movies and eating ice cream with only my thigh-high soccer socks on." But Megan admits, "Sex is my favorite activity. I'm very open and comfortable with my sexuality. I love men, and I love women. I'm an aggressive, skilled seductress and dominatrix with an oral fixation. I have a talented mouth. I also get off on having sex in public places where I might get caught." "My fantasy is to be tied up by a man and a hot chick, who torture me with pain and pleasure till I can't take it anymore. Then they untie me, and we have hot, rough, amazing sex."

BARELY LEGAL BLOWJOB ACADEMY

PHOTOGRAPHY COURTESY HUSTLER VIDEO

CLEO VIXEN &
NATASHA STARR

NATASHA STARR &
JOSELINE KELLY

School is in session, and the curriculum's all about blowjobs. Studies include Deep-Throating 101, Advanced Teabagging and Rimmers for Beginners. The threeway club meets after school every day, and oral superenthusiasts earn extra points toward their GPA. Join teachers Natasha Starr and Dahlia Sky as they put barely legal cuties through their paces. Yes, school sucks; that's why no one wants to graduate. To order Barely Legal Blowjob Academy, call 800-763-8271 ext. 7675 or visit HustlerStore.com.

FIRST TIME IN AMERICA

That's right!!! Marilyn is the ONLY human-like ACTION DOLL available in America. Her success in Europe has been so overwhelming, that we've brought Marilyn to America. Let her American, Greek and French life-like reproduction female qualities astound you as they have others.

BUILT IN FEATURES

All of Marilyn's female components are built right into her body. Her breasts are human-like in EVERY detail, both in texture and structure, right down to the finest point. This is an exclusive feature that is ONLY available on the Marilyn doll. Her open mouth is an achievement in design. The human-like action, tight-flexible cheeks inside her mouth, work on the principle of air suction. Just squeeze the back of her head gently, and watch her pulsating mouth come to life. Her mouth is precise enough to grasp a pencil. Marilyn comes with all the female parts you expect. Even THESE parts were designed to act as human-like as possible. Her well rounded hips and legs are soft and flexible. You can make Marilyn thin, you can make her shapely, you can make her pleasingly plump, in fact Tiger, you can make her ANY way you desire.

FEATURES

- FLESH LIKE VINYL BODY
- DEEP THROAT ACTION OPEN MOUTH
- ALL FEMALE PARTS BUILT IN
- NEW! EXTRA LARGE BREASTS
- LIFE LIKE IN EVERY DETAIL
- MOUTH POWERED BY AIR SUCTION
- HUMAN-LIKE ACTION
- FRENCH & GREEK DESIGN
- ELECTRONIC POWERED

THE ONLY ACTION DOLL

Don't confuse Marilyn with toy like dolls being sold on the market. Marilyn is NOT a toy. She was designed for the ACTION MINDED man. Imagine coming home to your own 21st Century play-girl always ready for action.

DRESS HER UP

Dress her up in lingerie, bathing suit, dainty underclothes, tight fitting sheek dresses, pant outfits, mini skirts or leather. Her well rounded legs can wear any style boots or shoes, nylons or hose. Think of the fun you'll have dressing Marilyn the way YOU feel a woman should dress. And best of all Marilyn knows how to show her appreciation. Order now, while she is still available at this extremely low price, or before she becomes a collectors item.

The only electronic doll with action mouth & pulsating pussy.

(Marilyn designed from above drawings)

Marilyn sold as an adult novelty item only. Sale to minors forbidden.

BECKY & JADEN

KNOTTED & NICE

HUSTLER CLASSIC
PHOTOGRAPHY BY CLIVE McLEAN

Bondage is all about trust," Becky says as she binds her playmate. Jaden, the nubile 19-year-old with the deer-in-the-headlights expression on her face, simply nods her head in agreement.

"It's role-playing, plain and simple," Becky continues. "Right now I'm the queen bitch, and Jaden is my slave."

A couple flips of the rope and licks of labes later, the tables turn. "Now I'm in charge," Jaden spits, shoving her dong into Becky's cooch, "and trust me, you're going to pay."

KIMBER WOODS

Christmas comes early with Kimber Woods, Santa's naughty helper and our favorite up-and-coming starlet. We spend the day with this enthusiastic, energetic, gorgeous delight and discover that behind the sweet smile is a third-degree karate black belt. Interview by Shane Andalou. Photography by Sir Ron.

BREAKING INTO THE BIZ

If you think porn is just about showing up and fucking, then you're deeply misinformed. The truth is, adult entertainment is a demanding mistress, where only the shrewdest and most persistent endure. Do you have what it takes? Find out in this detailed how-to guide from John Blaylock.

FOUR EYES THREE HOLES

Do men make passes at girls who wear glasses? Hell, yes! Celebrate the new sexy. Presenting nerd nookie at its finest, with Natalia Starr, Kat Dior, Abella Danger and more. Photography courtesy HUSTLER Video.

I looked down at her soft flowing hair as she began my healing. She glided me past her soft lips into her warm wet mouth which sent tingling sparks to my brain
I made my way down kissing her neck, erect nipples, belly and then to her feminine flower that was already dripping wet and hot.
Clean, smooth, tasty with perfect small delicate petals. My favorite kind of flower to dine on. And I did and loved it.
She is the girl that in high school everybody wanted and only the star quarterback got.
